

REINSURANCE

The roots of reinsurance can be traced back to the 14th century when it was primarily used for marine and fire insurance. Since then, unparalleled volatility has been creating new risks and opportunities and reinsurance has grown to cover every aspect of the modern insurance market. Insurers need to lower their exposure to unfortunate events by spreading parts of the coverage to other insurance companies (reinsurance), thus avoiding the cost to bankrupt or financially ruin the insurance company and avoiding the inability to cover the loss for the original company that paid the insurance premium.

WHO WE ARE

SPREADING THE RISKS OF TOMORROW

Our Reinsurance division provides risk advisory and broking services to both insurers and reinsurers worldwide. Their engagement spans the full spectrum of claims advocacy to capital management and risk transfer solutions to help diminish unpredictability and grow more robust businesses. This expertise combined with Minet's vast knowledge of the African continent allows us to provide clients with tailor-made packages that best suit their needs.
